foreword

Life in Manhattanville is a unique creation. Not the product of a single idea, it is the surge of many minds and hearts. Its spirit is manifest — the guitars, banjos in hootenanny harmonies, the thrill of phone calls, unexpected visitors, the spontaneous tales and laughter, the never ending bridge games, alarms ringing, girls rising. It is the meeting of faculty and students over snack bar tables. It grows. It is the discovery of beauty in each new season on campus; it is the joy of living with youth wondering. It is the glow of finding a friend, of falling in love. It is the outpouring of this experience to others less fortunate. It breeds that smile, that 'Hello' which greets you in the halls, on the walks, everywhere. It tells you that the something encountered lies deeper still.

It is all of these pictures, these voices, these people, all bound up in the principal reason for Manhattanville's existence—learning. Learning from classes, seminars, lectures and books presupposes freedom to think many thoughts, to understand in part, to search further. Mutual search sparks scholastic enthusiasm and courage to move towards the yet unknown. Self is given to the search, return comes, and dialogue is born.

The life of dialogue is self-generating; it rises from recognition of another's presence to recognition of Divine Presence. Perhaps it is here that our probing must deepen and rest. To know is to understand; to comprehend in depth is to love. Living love expands the subject's circumference, and creates upon an existing base. Manhattanville is both the core and the new creation.

MOTHER O'BYRNE

dedication

A liberal arts college exists not to communicate facts to its students, but to enable them to see relationships. It requires that a student study a wide variety of subjects, that she may be able to see a bar of music and a mathematical equation, and understand the similarities of the two. It refuses to relegate knowledge to separate compartments because it recognizes that life is not so patterned, and that it is for life that it must prepare the student.

If Manhattanville has been at all successful in carrying out the purpose of a liberal arts education, it is due in great part to the vision of its President, Mother O'Byrne. For she has inaugurated a wide and expanding college curriculum to help her students meet the demands of today's increasingly complex world. But she has also recognized that a liberal education does not lie in academic learning alone, that it is rather by the union of academic and social life that a student acquires meaningful ideas. Thus she strives to make Manhattanville a part of the world community instead of merely a college planet, so its students may become worthy citizens and architects of the future. Finally, understanding that no academic or social ideal can be true unless solidly based on spiritual realities, she has so orientated Manhattanville life that each student may discover and grow in knowledge of the Sacred Heart, source of all truth.

It is in gratitude for this vision and effort that we dedicate this yearbook to her, gratitude for the opportunities we have been given, gratitude for the charity which enables us to realize what it means to be rooted and grounded in love. In this charity, this love, Mother O'Byrne epitomizes Manhattanville, and through her example, inspires us to do the same.

If but our graceful halls and walls could speak,
Our gently green and flowing slopes give tongue,
What would they say of various hopes and fears,
Or faiths or doubts, or longings that the young
Women dwelling here must entertain?

They would recount how zeal does ward off well
The weariness that work and study bring,
Echoing myriad voices of their dwellers
That walk the path to truth, and sweetly sing
That learning's joy is equal to its pain.

But since they must be still and silent ever,
Must dumbly watch and eyelessly look on,
Let beauty be their voice to speak for us,
Sing quiet hymns of love when we have gone,
Unending praise, and thanks for its refrain.

"My gazing soul would dwell an hour
And in those weaker glories spy
Some shadow of eternity."
Henry Vaughan

The surface structure of the teacher-student relationship appears almost to defeat itself. The unchannelled, impressionable mind of the student is but one source of frustration to his teacher; the task of confining yet freeing that sometimes unwieldy, sometimes too pliable mind, is another.

And which of us can resist the temptation to force his teacher to conform to the preconditions for learning he demands? Why is the sky blue? He doesn't know, does he? Why does he wear bow ties? He must create in us the desire to take what he's giving. Why should he?

Somehow, on this uncommon ground, the foundation of "dialogue" is laid. Who knows at what point in the tedious process of constant, conscious effort by teacher and gradual maturation of student the "some shadow of eternity" is spied?

"Sent forth from the natural domain of species into the hazard of the solitary category, secretly and bashfully he watches for a Yes which allows him to be and which can come to him only from the one human person to another."
Martin Buber

Thrust into an atmosphere not quite real, but too intense to be artificial, she stumbled upon her autonomy, certainly the most exciting, yet lonely of fields for exploration. She locked herself up with it, played on it, laughed and cried and puzzled over it; not caring or daring to share it.

Who would have dreamed she was to become uneasy with her very own "self", frightened of it, stuck with it? As she, or it grew, she found she could not vent her anger with it or see her joy in it until she saw it in the mirror of someone else.

"Growth in dialogue" opened for her a hall of mirrors, and she became the Senior Class.

"So there stood youth and there childhood together . . .
Each wanted the other to start talking."
Yevtushenko

We live together here. Sliding up and down the tongue of our Old Woman's shoe we laugh and wave at each other.

We talk. If I tell me to you, don't listen please, but tell it back to me when I am tired.

Together, we ignore each other, for in the name of individuality we are learning to be cautious. We compete with words, with silence, with calculated smiles.

Together, we learn to live together here. Four years of thank-yous is a long time.

Gray morning sky low over the wooded glade;

Full fair ready to be on wing —
Wingless.

Through prickly moors or dusty ways she must wind.
Traveler: untamed and gentle
Product of the wilderness
Destined for the sky.

Up with me! Up with me into the clouds!
Soaring; now dipping from the heights into the abyss:
The journey rugged and uneven
She moves through mirrored corridors.

Spontaneous wisdom breathed by health.
Learned, yet unlearned, yet
With hopes for higher raptures.

Earth has not anything to show more fair.
She comes: joyous as morning
With a madness about her
Full of gladness and as free as heaven.

Ships, towers, domes, theatres, and temples lie beyond.
In the first splendor: new footsteps on the garden path
Pale dawnlight about to break forth into the majesty of day;
Promises yet to be unfolded.

"They set up a noise like crickets
And a chattering wise and sweet . . ."
W. B. Yeats

The strange cries of a female halfback to her teammates; rubber boots on snow; muzak bouncing off the hum of table-talk. Listen to Manhattanville's women.

They answer sparrows in March and sulk at the indifference of rain. Just when their energy is most boundless they fall asleep. Theirs are noises of surrender overridden by determination, of discovery touched with ennui. They are at once lovers of the law and giddy rebels.

Listen to the voices of almost-women growing.
